THE PUBLICATION PROCESS

The Hofstra Law Review uses the following system to assure the accuracy and integrity of your article:

STEP 1: SENDING YOUR ARTICLE / CONVERSION

To begin the publication process, we must receive an electronic copy of your article, formatted in Microsoft Word or Corel WordPerfect. The electronic copy may be provided to us via electronic mail. Upon receipt, your article is assigned to a Research Editor and an Articles Editor who shepherd your article through the publication process.

At this point, the Managing Office uses desktop publishing software from our printer to convert the manuscript to law review format. This conversion provides the Managing Office with pages formatted exactly as your article will appear in printed form.

STEP 2: SOURCE RETRIEVAL / FAST-TRACK

The Research Editor creates a list of all the sources cited in your article. Staff Members of the Hofstra Law Review, under the supervision of the Research Editor, gather the sources in their original form and place them in a file designated for your article. The editor may contact you to clarify citations or to obtain obscure sources directly from you to expedite the cite-checking process and to ensure complete accuracy in all footnotes.

Additionally, before your article is sent to the Staff Members for cite-checking, the Articles Editor fast-tracks your article. At this point, the Articles Editor becomes familiarized with your article, and corrects any obvious Bluebook, spelling, or grammar errors.

STEP 3: CITE-CHECK / COORDINATION

Once the source file is complete and your article has been fast-tracked, our Staff Members then cite-check your article. Cite-checking involves ensuring the accuracy and content of each citation, proper Bluebook form, correct spelling and grammar, and adequate support for each substantive assertion. Following the cite-check, the assigned Articles Editor coordinates the changes suggested by each Staff Member and updates the manuscript.

STEP 4: PROOFREADING / AUTHOR APPROVAL

After the Articles Editor has completed the coordination, the Managing Editors proofread your article and perform a “Source Pull,” which consists of thoroughly double-checking that every substantive assertion has adequate support, and that all quotations are correct. A copy of your article is then returned to you for your approval and final revisions.

When your final revisions have been received, in order to assure accuracy through redundancy, one final proofread is then conducted. During these “Reading Days,” a small group of editors will orally read your article. Please note that during the Reading Day, we will not make any substantive changes to your article; rather, we will look for formatting and Bluebooking errors.

STEP 5: FINAL FORMATTING / GOING TO PRINT

Following the incorporation of your final changes, the entire issue is sent to the printer. “Galley Pages” are generated by the printer and are proofread by the Managing Office, so that the printer can make any minor, last-minute changes.

Once the galley pages are corrected, the entire order of books is printed and several unbound copies are forwarded to the Managing Office for final approval. The Managing Office then gives the printer authorization to bind the entire order. The printer ships the issue to all of our subscribers within one week of the authorization to bind. The printer also forwards each article to LEXIS, Westlaw and HeinOnline to ensure timely on-line availability. At this point, a copy of your article will also be placed on the Hofstra Law Review website.

REPRINT AND COPYRIGHT POLICY

REPRINT POLICY

Each author of an article receives five (5) copies of the issue in which the article appears, and fifty (50) special cover reprints of his or her article, compliments of the Hofstra Law Review.

Additional reprints are available at additional cost. As the price of reprints depends upon the size of the article, authors should inquire as to pricing of reprints at the time of publication.

COPYRIGHT POLICY

Our copyright agreement seeks to protect the rights of the Hofstra Law Review as the original publisher, while at the same time giving authors the right to republish their articles. Our Publication Agreement grants the Hofstra Law Review the right to publish, reproduce, and distribute the articles in all types of publication media. The Hofstra Law Review will make reasonable efforts to notify the author about for-profit third party requests for permission to reprint or reproduce the author's work and allow the author seven days to provide written objection to this request for republication. After original publication, authors retain the right to republish their articles as long as the Hofstra Law Review is credited as the original publisher. We believe that this is an equitable and balanced agreement for both the Hofstra Law Review and our authors.

Authors may obtain a copy of the Publication Agreement from the Managing Office.

HOFSTRA UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW

Hofstra University is a private institution established in 1935. The 238-acre campus is located 25 miles east of New York City. The Hofstra University School of Law opened in 1970 and graduated its first class in 1973.

Hofstra's greatest strength is its faculty. Their range of experience includes clerkships for Supreme Court Justices, practice with law firms of all sizes and types, pioneering public interest work, and outstanding government service. As scholars, many are recognized as leaders in their fields, both within the United States and internationally.

The Deane Law Library is one of the best assets of the School of Law. The Library collection comprises approximately 534,000 print and microform volumes. Taken together, the libraries of Hofstra University hold over one million volumes.
