Discussion, Debate and Developments in Law
In the past five years, Hofstra Law’s 37 full-time faculty members have written or edited more than 20 books as well as 250 articles, essays and book chapters. These publications reflect a wide range of interests and expertise, ongoing participation in important scholarly debates, and significant contributions to the study and teaching of law. With particular depth in both family and international law, the faculty’s collective body of work speaks to a broad variety of legal issues ranging from the death penalty, legal ethics, and voting rights to liability for mass torts and the challenges posed by advances in reproductive technology.
