HONORS, APPOINTMENTS AND OTHER ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Burton Agata, Professor Emeritus, published a co-authored volume, The History of the New York Court of Appeals, 1932-2003, with Columbia University Press.

Baruch Bush submitted final reports to the Hewlett Foundation on two research projects he co-directed. The first project studied barriers to the participation of minorities in the ADR field, while the second studied the discourse markers of transformative shifts in mediated conflict.

Bennett Capers delivered the Fall 2006 Hofstra University Distinguished Faculty Lecture, based on his paper "On Justitia, Race, Gender, and Blindness," on October 25, 2006.

J. Herbie DiFonzo and Mary E. O'Connell's "The Family Law Education Reform Project: Final Report" was the centerpiece in October of a Special Issue of the Family Court Review, dedicated to The Family Law Education Reform Project.

Eric Freedman directed "Reclaiming the First Amendment: A Conference on Constitutional Theories of Media Reform," which was held at Hofstra Law School on January 19. He was selected by the Law School Alumni Association to receive the Stuart Rabinowitz Teaching Award. He was also named to the Board of Advisors of Capital Punishment Research Initiative at SUNY-Albany. Professor Freedman was interviewed about Guantanamo detainee issues on the Talking Dog Blog on November 6, and his book Habeas Corpus was the subject of extended discussion in a FindLaw column by John Dean on January 26. Finally, the December issue of Champion, journal of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, reviews Professor Freedman's "brilliant article" (published in the July issue of the Cornell Law Review) about the right to counsel in capital post-conviction litigation.
